New operations facility is an eye catching, multifunctional unit

The workshop is adjacent to the administration building. The hall covers some 1,700 m² and houses a washing bay, which is supplied by a well 16m deep. Daylight is directed into the interior of the hall through roof lights in the ceiling and twelve glazed doors. The technical equipment for the workshop includes two overhead cranes and three assembly pits with up to 30m in length. A 25m long steel structure connects the workshop to the comprehensive display hall, which covers some 5,600m^2.

The largest building element of the facility is the supplies and equipment hall, which consists of a 20m high central aisle and two lean-to roofs. Among other things, it serves as a storage facility for large cranes.

The majority of the hall floors and the entire outdoor facilities have been surfaced with a highly durable asphalt system. To allow rainwater to soak away over the extensive asphalt surface, the civil engineering specialists from PORR have laid troughs with humus and an underground soak away system.

The construction of the Prangl facility demonstrates the many sided expertise of PORR, from asphalting to building offices. Emphasis was placed on the highest standards of quality and astute implementation, and allows for sustainable utilisation of the facilities for many years ahead.
